We examined the familial effects of cognitive impairment in Parkinson's disease. We studied 45 unmedicated probands and 45 of their first-degree relatives in the multicenter Parkinson's Disease Progression Markers Initiative study who were assessed at baseline using the motor, cognitive, and neuropsychiatric features of the Movement Disorder Society Rating Scale. Cognitive performance was assessed using the Montreal Cognitive Assessment. Principal component analysis was performed on the 19 items of the MCQ. Age- and sex-adjusted familial correlations were estimated for cognitive variables and also for the Mini-Mental State Examination, the Montreal Cognitive Assessment, the total score on the Movement Disorder Society Rating Scale, and the 9 individual motor, functional, and neuropsychiatric items. Cognitive variables had high phenotypic (intra-familial) correlations with similar magnitudes for both unadjusted and adjusted correlations. Individual items had significant phenotypic correlations with similar magnitudes for both unadjusted and adjusted correlations. The highest phenotypic correlations were seen for the total Movement Disorder Society Rating Scale score and executive functioning variables. Results were robust for the Movement Disorder Society Rating Scale items that show greater agreement among relative pairs. There is a familial effect of cognitive impairment in Parkinson's disease that is not fully explained by general cognitive impairment. This effect might be related to a general tendency of cognitive processes to interact across cognitive domains or might be due to shared genetic influences.Birthday:April 13th 2008Likes:sleeping, eating, playing with sticks, riding around, chewing on stuff, snuggling, and getting breakfast off the floor when he wakes up from his nap.Pet-Peeves:thunder, ants, and other moles, noses stuck out of things, and music that is out of tuneFavorite Toys:Nope, I don't have any!Favorite Food:Broccoli, olives, ice water and most of all HOT foodFavorite Walk:haha, walk, I guess.Best Tricks:rolling, sitting, drinking out of the toilet.Arrival Story:He came to us as a "rescue pup" from a large town in PA.
